Looking into the Future: Teaching Notes

Target Structure:	Future Perfect Simple / Future Continuous (Progressive)
Vocabulary:	General
Level:	Intermediate, but can be adjusted for other levels
Time:	One Hour (depending on discussion)
Preparation:	None

Suggested Teaching Method

This worksheet has a balance of controlled written exercises, and discussion practice.

The 'production' stage of the worksheet has two options. If you have lots of students, the 'find someone who' page will work well. If you have only a few students (or just one), the 'about you' discussion may be more suitable.

- 1 Give one worksheet to each student. Students should ask the opening question to their partner. Elicit a couple of answers from the group. This should be brief: the main speaking activities are at the end.
- 2 Set the scene for the conversation. Tell the students that two co-workers are talking about the future. Students should read the conversation silently, and fill in the spaces with the words in the box on the left.

Go through the answers, and let the students practice the conversation twice, changing roles.
- 3 This exercise checks students' understanding of the difference in meaning between the future perfect simple and the future continuous.

Students can discuss this in pairs. Depending on your students' understanding, you may need to do a brief presentation on the use of the two tenses.
- 4 - 6 Exercises four to six provide controlled practice of the future perfect simple and the future continuous.

Students can work on these exercises alone, and check in pairs.
- 7 If you have smaller groups or just one or two students, you can finish this worksheet with discussion. Give the students time to read the statements, and circle true or false.

Students can then form questions for these statements, and ask each other, using follow-up questions, where appropriate. Monitor, and make notes on relevant errors. These errors can be corrected when the discussion comes to a close.

Alternatively, for larger groups, use the 'find someone who' activity. Students should read the topics first, and then go around the room, looking for someone who will be doing / will have done the topic listed in the first column. The activity can be extended by asking follow-up questions and making notes in the box for affirmative answers.

Students should try to talk to as many people as possible in this exercise.
